

Hello everyone – hope you are making the best of the humidity this weekend.

Sunday is Father's Day and this weekend is time to recognize all the men in our lives who have been there for us to support us, build us up, watch over us and teach us how to be humble, patient and strong.

As a father myself, I know how challenging and how rewarding it can be, not only to raise a family, but to nurture and mentor young minds and help to lead them into the future. As we navigate this pandemic, our expectations for the immediate future may look a little different than we planned. However, this time will pass, and when we look back on this period in our lives, we want to be able to say we did everything we could to support our children, our young people, our families our parents and each other to the best of our abilities.

To all the men out there, you are models for our youth. How you behave has a far reaching influence on the young people who look to you for guidance. If we want our future generations to be kinder, more tolerant and accepting of diversity, then our work, not just as Fathers, but as human beings, starts now.

Here at Thrive, we all know the importance of family, and although the word may mean different things to different people, the connections we have with those we love and care for are far-reaching. So take this weekend to celebrate the men who have made a difference in your life and helped to shape and influence who you are today. Let them know you love and care for them, just as they have loved and cared for you.

Thank you to all our staff who are fathers, grandfathers, uncles and friends, thank you for continuing to look after your families, thank you for working hard to keep them safe, healthy and cared for. Thank you to all the fathers working this weekend, so that others might have some time off to relax, refresh and recharge.

Thank you all for continuing to keep the Fathers who live with us across our seventeen locations safe, healthy and strong.

Enjoy your Father's Day.
